This scoring will determine which Offerors are considered to be in the competitive range and may be the basis for an award decision without further steps.

If the selection committee elects not to award based upon evaluation scoring, it may engage in a forced elimination process. To inform this process, it may require oral presentations or interviews with the Offerors considered to be in the competitive range. If oral presentations or interviews are conducted, they may also be scored, or they may simply be considered as information supporting the forced elimination process. The selection committee may request revisions to the proposal from each of the Offerors at the conclusion of the interviews. The intent of the forced elimination process is to reach consensus. The decision will be based on all relevant factors, and based upon perception of best value. The final decision may or may not exactly reflect scoring ranking.

The Contractor

hereby agrees to relieve the City from all claims and liability due to the Contractor's negligence.

The flow down clause shall cause all of the terms and conditions of this Contract, including all of the applicable parts of the Contract Documents, to be incorporated into all subcontracts, agreements with outside associates, and agreements with other contractors. The flow down clause shall provide clearly that there is no privity of contract between the City and the Contractor's subcontractors, outside associates, and other contractors.

EXHIBIT 5 STATEMENT OF WORK FOR COMMUNITY PLAN DEVELOPMENT

INTRODUCTION

The City of Colorado Springs is seeking proposals from qualified firm(s) to develop community plans for the newly established Neighborhood/Community Planning Program managed by the Comprehensive Planning Division of the City of Colorado Springs. Qualified firms should particularly be prepared to address the west, southwest, and south central sub-areas of the City, identified as planning area 3A, anticipated to be the first plan area. These community plans will focus on land use and community health, but will also incorporate other topic areas such as transportation planning, public safety, climate resiliency, economic development, and housing. Each community plan encompasses approximately 1/12th of the City (about 40,000) residents and will include neighborhood sub-areas. Plans are anticipated to take 12 to 18 months from kickoff through adoption by City Council. Funding is only budgeted for the next plan, however, subject to funding, this contract has the potential to extend five to six years to majority completion of all community plans. The successful proposal should be responsive to both the first plan and overall program needs and expectations. The successful proposal should anticipate a first plan budget of $140,000 for 2021, and a highly likely additional $60,000 allotted in 2022, for a total plan budget of $200,000. Neighborhood planning is a priority for the City, and staff anticipated the same level of funding for future neighborhood plans undertaken by the program. However, funding is not guaranteed until the corresponding year's budget is approved by the City Council. It is anticipated that City staff and the consultant will combine experiences from the ongoing Southeast Community Plan process (being primarily undertaken using in-house resources) with the second community plan (supported by this consultant) to develop a replicable template and process to carry forward for subsequent community plans.

BACKGROUND

Colorado Springs at-a-glance:

Colorado Springs is a large growing, but also maturing, Home Rule City with a current population of about 490,000 (2020). The City has a land area of approximately 200 square miles, with the potential for additional annexations. Its fiscal and political philosophies trend conservative, with a continuing emphasis on supporting jobs and a business-friendly climate with many small business support initiatives. The City owns its utility system (water, wastewater, gas, and electric) which is operated as a separate enterprise under the direction of Utilities Board which at this time is comprised of City Council. In late 2010, the City's voters approved a major change in governance from a Council-Manager to a Mayor-Council form. Located at the base of Pikes Peak, called America's Mountain, Colorado Springs places great value on the city's scenery and outdoor recreational opportunities. Lately, the city has been ranking highly on various "best of" lists including: U.S. News & World Report's No. 1 "Most Desirable Place to Live (2019)" and Outside Online's No. 2 "Next Dream Outdoor Hub," among others. For more information on the city's ongoing initiatives, notable development projects, and data trends, please reference the 2019 and 2020 PlanCOS Annual Reports at www.coloradosprings.gov/plancos.

Neighborhood Planning Program & Community Plans:

PlanCOS, Colorado Springs' new comprehensive plan, states small area land use plans are essential for implementation of the PlanCOS vision. PlanCOS sets the overall vision and framework, but neighborhood plans are necessary to apply this larger vision in a practical manner by creating an avenue for planning and implementation at scale that can address the unique characteristics and needs of different localities of the city. As a direct recommendation from PlanCOS, the Neighborhood Planning Program was formed to manage the creation and implementation of these "community plans." The City of Colorado Springs' Comprehensive Planning Division of the City Planning Department divided the city into twelve community planning areas, generally dividing each City Council district in half. Comprehensive Planning staff are currently undertaking the Southeast Community Plan which is identified as plan area 4A in the attached map. Note that these initial boundaries are subject to refinement and that the alpha-numeric designations are placeholders, prior to community-generated naming and branding.

All twelve community plans are anticipated to be an overall plan for the physical development of the land within the specified boundary that will be supported by site-specific, neighborhood-specific recommendations. Staff developed a list of high, medium, and low priority plan areas using datasets that identify different levels of planning need, such as:

- The subject areas either lack a land use master plan or the land use master plan is functionally out of date and no longer effective
- Proportion of vacant land not within an operative land use master plan
- The neighborhoods are either currently experiencing land use change, or expected to be impacted by land use activity both within and outside the plan boundary
- Land use applications have been relatively controversial
- Other departments or agencies are actively working on projects, plans, or studies within a plan boundary opening up possible coordination opportunities

The Community Planning Program focusses on mature and maturing areas of the City, which also do not have a high proportion of operative privately initiated land use master plans. Therefore, even in the 5-6 year time period, it may not be deemed necessary to develop a City-initiated Community Plan for certain newer or undeveloped areas of the City.

Community plans will be a land-use centered, but should also address other related topics such as transportation planning, economic development, public safety, housing, and homelessness as appropriate. All community plans will be organized around the six Vision Themes established by PlanCOS—Vibrant Neighborhoods, Unique Places, Renowned Culture, Strong Connections, Thriving Economy, and Majestic Landscapes. To help ensure the neighborhood planning process is equitable across the city, the process and final documents should be relatively consistent across community plans. However, city planning staff recommends anticipating a front-loaded process where the document is partially completed before beginning a public-facing process. Adjustments to an established process may be made in order to address an area's specific need, find and utilize efficiencies, and to support innovative ideas. Please see PlanCOS for additional detail regarding the Vision Themes and need for a consistent community plan process.

As part of the Southeast Community Plan process, the Neighborhood Planning Program is establishing a neighborhood health index measuring resident health, food access, and climate resiliency indicators. All community plans will need to utilize those indicators to measure the health of the neighborhoods within the planning boundary. A health assessment of the plan boundary may be necessary, but the extent and emphasis of the health assessment will depend on the indicators. Community health, food access, and climate resiliency have not been traditionally included in the City's physical development planning process, but the Neighborhood Planning Program is adding this approach into all community plans. The challenge will to be effectively address these emerging topics in an effective and contextually useful way. The goals discussed in PlanCOS were heavily influenced by public and stakeholder input. Through those public outreach efforts, staff continually heard of residents' desire to be more participatory in their community's growth. We feel it is important to utilize the current eagerness of residents to participate in the planning process to build trust in the community, and to assist in setting up a regulatory environment which facilitates a positive trajectory of the area that is directed and desired by residents. The public outreach process will need to be inclusive of all segments of the community including those traditionally difficult to reach such as those who do not speak English and those who do not have reliable access to technology. Staff also believes that targeted approaches for each of the neighborhoods within the plan boundary would be beneficial.

Planning Area 3A:

Planning area 3A covers roughly 7,741 acres about 505 of which are vacant. The area includes parts of western, southwestern, and south central Colorado Springs (excluding Downtown), and is home to just under 40,000 residents. The plan area boundaries are not finalized and may be slightly adjusted. The neighborhoods within this plan are home to a variety of housing types ranging from over 100 years old to built within the last year. This area of Colorado Springs continues to see interest in infill and redevelopment partially due to continuing investment in Downtown Colorado Springs and other factors such as tourism associated with the Old Colorado City and Manitou Springs historic districts and Garden of the Gods Park. Many of the neighborhoods within this plan boundary are considered desirable for their historic character, walkability, and bike-friendliness. These neighborhoods also have value due to their proximity to downtown, other commercial districts, recreational natural spaces, trails, and inter-city travel corridors such as Highway 24 and I-25. Some areas are prone to geologic hazards such as landslides, mining activity, uncontrolled fill, steep terrain, and subsidence.

There are many resident-lead organizations and associations who are active in supporting the neighborhoods within this plan boundary such as the Organization of Westside Neighbors, the Historic Preservation Alliance, the Old Colorado City Partnership, Ivywild Improvement Society, Hillside Neighborhood Association, Pleasant Valley Neighborhood Association, Skyway Association, and Mesa Neighborhood Association among others. This planning area also contains four urban renewal areas administered by the Urban Renewal Authority (URA). The South Nevada URA and the Ivywild Neighborhood URA are located just south of downtown, and the Gold Hill Mesa URA and Gold Hill Mesa Commercial URA are located just southeast of 21st Street and Highway 24. This plan area also contains a number of areas within the Pikes Peak Economic Opportunity Zones (EOZ), along with areas qualifying as LMI (low to moderate income).

There are a number of ongoing studies, plans, and assessments of the area, as well as a number of recently completed studies, plans, and assessments. A non-comprehensive list of such documents and efforts is provided in the next section.

The goals of the neighborhood planning program and all community plans are to:

- Prepare a detailed plan of the community's vision for the equitable development of their neighborhood and for a healthy community.

- Each of the plan efforts and content should be structured around the six Vision Themes established by PlanCOS—Vibrant Neighborhoods, Unique Places, Renowned Culture, Strong Connections, Thriving Economy, and Majestic Landscapes.
- Measure each neighborhood within a plan area against the healthy community indicators.
- Ensure reasonable consistency with relevant and ongoing plans such as:

- Address issues of affordable housing, homelessness, transportation, employment, education, open space, use-to-use compatibility, and connectivity.
- Lay groundwork for discussion of historic preservation of neighborhoods and features when/where applicable.
- Create prioritization and implementation schedule linked to responsible agencies and funding sources.
